

Sunspot Affecting Radio Links

LONDON, Feb. 13 (Reuters)
—A fairly large sunspot is seriously affecting world-wide radio communications and blackouts on some circuits are expected, British radio experts said here tonight. The experts forecast “moderately to severely disturbed” conditions from now to Feb. 20. Radio channels across the North Atlantic and from Europe to Asia are expected to be most affected during the hours of darkness.