

World Radio Signals Fade

New York Times (1857-Current file); Apr 17, 1957; ProQuest Historical Newspapers The New York Times
pg. 25

World Radio Signals Fade

LONDON, April 16 (Reuters)

—A spectacular fade-out of radio signals all over the world occurred today, starting at about 5 A. M. Eastern Standard time and lasting from a few minutes to several hours in some areas. This type of fade-out is named for its discoverer—an American called Dellinger—and is not uncommon during periods of high sunspot activity such as are being experienced at present.

Reproduced with permission of the copyright owner. Further reproduction prohibited without permission.